Notes	(Primary Grant)  Site survey. The original homestead for this estate has not been located. The manager's cottage is dated by its brickwork to 1840s-1880s. The Italianate Mansion on the hill location is likely to be the third residence - see other listing for Inveralochy. The first homestead may be in the vicinity of the manager's cottage - evidence includes stone outbuilding (servants quarters (?) with loft above, early brickwork to 1830s) and rectilinear layout of farm buildings. An alternative location is near the Italianate Mansion. Further research required.

 Portion 50 has been subdivided and given new portion numbers. Malton is on Portion 347.
 The land originally belonged to Rossville.

Malton Homestead and Outbuildings are associated with George Cole, and the spread of settlement and farming. The original stone cottage on this land was home to the Cole family from 1855. The extensive barn has been restored. The property is also significant for the way in which it, along with Cole Park, was subdivided into 19 Closer Settlement farms in 1911 (GMC).

 After site survey.
 Kingsdale was probably run from the neighbouring Norwood, keeping management within the confines of the larger Macarthur family. No homestead has as yet been identified. However there may have been outstations on Kingsdale, especially along the watercourses, including Sooley and Bumana Creeks. The Wollondilly River frontage would be a prime site, as indicated by the sheep sheds indicated on the Kingsdale Subdivision Plan 1880s - unfortunately time did not permit site inspection.
 During the later 19th century, various developments took place, the construction of the Kingsdale Hotel by 1884 and the Lime Quarries.

 There are no as yet identified early colonial farm buildings on Kingsdale. The estate was probably run from the neighbouring Norwood, keeping management within the confines of the larger Macarthur family. However there may have been outstations on Kingsdale, especially along the watercourses, including Sooley and Bumana Creeks. The Wollondilly River frontage would be a prime site, as indicated by the sheep sheds indicated on the Kingsdale Subdivision Plan 1880s - unfortunately time did not permit site inspection. The reference to a household on Kingsdale in the 1841 Census is confirmation that a household was located on the estate, away from Norwood.
 During the later 19th century, various developments took place, the construction of the Kingsdale Hotel by 1884 and the Lime Quarries.

Site survey.
 The original homestead for this estate has not been located. The manager's cottage is dated by its brickwork to 1840s-1880s.
 The Italianate Mansion on the hill location is likely to be the third residence - see other listing for Inveralochy.
 The first homestead may be in the vicinity of the manager's cottage - evidence includes stone outbuilding (servants quarters (?) with loft above, early brickwork to 1830s) and rectilinear layout of farm buildings.
 An alternative location is near the Italianate Mansion.
 Further research required.

Homestead	Possible
Notes	See Subdivision Plan – site of sheep sheds After site survey. Kingsdale was probably run from the neighbouring Norwood, keeping management within the confines of the larger Macarthur family. No homestead has as yet been identified. However there may have been outstations on Kingsdale, especially along the watercourses, including Sooley and Bumana Creeks. The Wollondilly River frontage would be a prime site, as indicated by the sheep sheds indicated on the Kingsdale Subdivision Plan 1880s - unfortunately time did not permit site inspection. During the later 19th century, various developments took place, the construction of the Kingsdale Hotel by 1884 and the Lime Quarries.

Notes	See Subdivision Plan – site of sheep sheds There are no as yet identified early colonial farm buildings on Kingsdale. The estate was probably run from the neighbouring Norwood, keeping management within the confines of the larger Macarthur family. However there may have been outstations on Kingsdale, especially along the watercourses, including Sooley and Bumana Creeks. The Wollondilly River frontage would be a prime site, as indicated by the sheep sheds indicated on the Kingsdale Subdivision Plan 1880s - unfortunately time did not permit site inspection. The reference to a household on Kingsdale in the 1841 Census is confirmation that a household was located on the estate, away from Norwood. During the later 19th century, various developments took place, the construction of the Kingsdale Hotel by 1884 and the Lime Quarries.
